STORY OF RISE OF BABE RUTH IS ROMANTIC

He Was Raised in an Industrial School Because of the Poverty of His Parents.

ALWAYS LIKED BASEBALL

Heavy Hitting Made Him Worth $125,000 to the Yankees and the Price Was Justified.

By HENRY L. FARRELL, (United Press Staff Correspondent.) Baseball has never known a greater figure, fiction never a more colorful and romantic hero than George (Babe) Ruth.

The rise of the chubby, nineteen-year-old boy from the obscurity of a walled industrial school to the pinnacle of fame, from poverty to affluence, makes one of the greatest stories of a decade.

But for one of those strokes of fate, which turn the destinies of great men's lives, Babe Ruth might now be an obscure tailor or an unknown cigarmaker instead of the greatest ball player the game has ever known.

Babe Ruth is the pride of the baseball fan, the idol of the kids and the biggest individual figure in sport because he was born with a baseball eye and he developed it from the time he was able to swing a bat.

He put heart and soul into baseball, and he rose until he became the greatest hitter of all times and a drawing card that broke the attendance record in every park in the American League last year.

"The Babe" started like one of Horatio Alger's embryo heroes of the slums. He was born of humble parents in Baltimore on February 7, 1894. Unable to make both ends meet, his parents turned him over to the Brothers of St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore before he was seven years old. It has been wrongly stated that the youngster was incorrigible and had to be turned over to the school for correction.

With the exception of a few summer periods when he was paroled under the care of his father, he remained at St. Mary's until he was nineteen years of age.

From the time he entered the institution he played baseball. Spring, summer, fall, and even on the sunny days of winter, he was on the diamond. He pitched, he caught, played the infield and the outfield with equal ability, but it was his batting that made him the most treasured player on the various teams of a league organized among the inmates of the school.

While his whole heart was in baseball, he prided himself upon the strength of the big, healthy body that made him adept at wrestling and gymnastic sports. He boasted of his hardy body and used to wear an open-necked shirt during the most severe of winter weather.

FAMOUS AT NINETEEN He became a subject for concern when he reached the age of nineteen. Unsophisticated by his long confinement and possessed of great vitality and energy, the Brothers at the institution had fears of what would happen if he were given his liberty without having a watchful eye over him.

Having observed his baseball talent and feeling sure that he could make a success of the professional game, the president of the institution asked Jack Dunn, manager of the Baltimore International League, to give him a trial.

Without having seen him in action, Dunn accepted him on the recommendation of his guardians, and took him to Baltimore in January, 1914. A week ahead of the club he went to the training camp at Fayetteville, N. C., where he caused a sensation by his hitting. Dunn started him as a pitcher, and he made good at once by defeating the Phillies, the Athletics and the Giants.

The Baltimore Club went on the rocks when the Federal League invaded, and Dunn had to get rid of his star players. He sold Ruth, Shore and Egan to the Boston Red Sox for $25,000.

Ruth continued as a pitcher with the Red Sox, and he was a mighty good one, perhaps the best southpaw in the league. But his batting was attracting more attention. In 1915 he won 18 out of 25 games and batted .315. In 1916 he won 23 out of 36 games and batted .272. In 1917 he won 24 out of 37 games and batted .325.

Realizing then that he was too valuable a man to be kept on the bench three or four games a week, the management of the club started using him alternately in the box, on first base and in the outfield. In 1918 he pitched and won 13 out of 20 games and batted .300. In the field he was handling himself acceptably.

It was in 1919 that he jumped into the spotlight as a home-run hitter and started the records that blazed him across the baseball sky. He pitched 14 games, winning 9 of them. He batted .322 and knocked 29 home runs, breaking all records.

SOLD FOR $125,000 Baseball had one of its greatest sensations in the winter following the 1919 season, when Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox sold Ruth to the New York Yankees for an announced sum of $125,000, but rumored to be greater. Ruth was admitted to be the greatest figure in the game, but the business sagacity of Colonel Ruppert and Hoston, owners of the Yankees, was questioned. Ruth brought with him, a contract for $20,000 a year, and it was predicted that the star slugger might be a "bust" and his purchasers never would get a return on their investment.

However, the deal proved a great money-maker in the 1920 season, when Ruth did the impossible and knocked 54 home runs. He broke the attendance record in every ball park, paid for himself in receipts and returned the club owners an estimated profit of close to a half-million. He broke even the 1920 home-run record in 1921, and again made the team a big financial winner.

Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, made a good right fielder out of him and, in addition to his slugging, he became one of the most consistent hitters in the league.

With all his success, the head of the great star was not turned. He is still the same unassuming, rather boyish youngster that came out of St. Mary's. He loves baseball and he plays every game with all his heart and soul. Opposing pitchers, managers and players admit he is the greatest of the great.

KAPPA ALPHAS WIN GAME

Defeat Sigma Phi Epsilons by Score 8 to 0.

The Kappa Alpha fraternity won 8.0 from the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity in an inter-fraternity game on Rollins Field yesterday afternoon. The feature of the game was the pitching of Murray Whitehead for the winners. He allowed only one hit during the seven innings and struck out ten men.

The championship is now conceded to lay between the Sigma Nus, the Kappa Sigmas and the Kappa Alphas, as each of these fraternities has won in the first round of play by large scores.

A. L. FLAG NOT YET TO N. Y.

Cleveland Beat Chicago 3 to 2 Yesterday While New York Was Idle.

The American League pennant for 1921 may fly in New York but the Cleveland Indians are not ready to admit it yet. The Indians' 3-to-2 victory over Chicago yesterday left the championship still a possibility for the Ohio club and demonstrated that Cleveland has not lost its punch in the final games as did Pittsburgh in the National League. New York was idle yesterday on account of rain. A loss on the part of the Indians means a New York pennant.

Here's how the American League pennant contenders stack up before today's games and who they play:

Clubs: W. L. Pct. Win Lose

New York 95 55 .633 .636 .629

Cleveland 93 58 .616 .618 .612

Cleveland at Chicago.

Boston at New York.

In a fast game on a slow field the Columbia High School football team defeated the Missouri School for the Deaf and Dumb at Fulton yesterday afternoon 13 to 0. In the third quarter Gwinn and Cassidy went over for the two touchdowns of the game.

Coach "Shorty" Forrester said last night that he was pleased with the showing made by the Kewpies and looked forward to a successful season.

The Obligation to Buy-- Good Printing

You buy printing but for one purpose—to place your message before the many.

There is a definite obligation upon every man who seeks the service of a printer. He must not use press, paper, type, and ink to produce that which is false, foolish, or ugly.

It is something to know that good printing is more profitable than poor printing. But it is a greater satisfaction to feel that your printing expresses not alone the best that is in you, but the best efforts of the printer, the ink maker, the engraver.
